Stretch Armstrong

A hip-hop fixture since the dawn of the '90s, Stretch Armstrong (born Adrian Bartos) has been instrumental in presenting up-and-coming MCs through his media barrage of radio programs, mixtapes, and even video games. The New York native's first notoriety came as one-half of the Stretch Armstrong and Bobbito Show, which quickly became one of the premier forums for the city's emerging hip-hop talent to be heard. Several of the '90s' biggest names in rap received early notice on the Columbia University radio program, including the debut of the Notorious B.I.G.

By 1998, the show had run its course, but not before the Village Voice declared the Stretch Armstrong and Bobbito Show "the best hip-hop show in New York" and Source magazine voted it "the best hip-hop show of all time." The demise of the show was not the end of Armstrong's radio career, however, and it was on Hot 97 – the only commercial radio station in New York dedicated to hip-hop at the time – that he continued with XL Radio. The mid-'90s also saw the first of Armstrong's forays into record production with Dolo, which released singles from MF Grimm, the Korp, Dutchmin, and Powerule.

Mr Stretch's continuous flex makes music and parties we love and couldn't be without.

Crookers

The Crookers project was born in 2003 by the meet of djs and producers Phra and Bot. Crookers have changed, in a brief time, the international electro music rules thanks to their experience and rhythmic power. Crooker is considered a real phenomena. On tour since one year and a half they've kept of fire dance floors all over the world, from London to LA, alone or with some of the most important djs in the world. When they're not clubbing or busy in a festival Phra and Bot are use to work in studio, and they do it with style considering all the people they work with! From Kanye West to Soulwax and don't forget Will I Am, Roisin, Murphy, Cavallera, Madness, Chemical Brother. It's clear they are one of the most important and beloved "electro" reality; and when this book was printed they were second in the UK single chart and just reached the impressive amount of 5 million youtube plays for their kid cudi "day N nite" remix, a success that can be double if you consider all the unofficial versions...

Matthew Weinstein

Matthew Weinstein is an artist who lives and works in NY. Weinstein's primary medium is 3-D animation and rendering. He creates animated spectacles, involving actors, musicians and animators. He then creates paintings and sculptures, utilizing a wide variety of technologies; bronze casting, rapid prototype sculpture, airbrush, stenciling and resin casting. As Weinstein's cast of virtual singing characters expands, a digital repertory company begins to exist. Characters from one project appear in another, or in a painting or a sculpture. Weinstein sees himself as a miniature Walt Disney who doesn't lie to children.

Weinstein's primary gallery is the Sonnabend Gallery in NY. He also exhibits nationally and internationally.

His work was the subject of a major installation at the Pinakothek der Moderne in Munich, Germany.
